Art & Light Gallery in Greenville, SC, Features Works by Erin Hughes

Art & Light Gallery in Greenville, SC, is presenting Conversing with Place, featuring a solo exhibit of works by Erin Hughes of Anderson, SC, on view through May 31, 2025. A reception will be held on May 2, from 6-8pm, during Greenville's 1st Friday artwalk.

Erin Hughes is a self-taught artist best known for her mixed-media encaustic paintings. She was an emerging artist at Artisphere in 2024 and her work has been featured in Faire, Talk, and TOWN Carolina magazine. Through the process of carving, painting, and fusing layers of encaustic medium and oils, Hughes attempts to build the history of a relationship with the natural world. She focuses on the nuances of beauty, especially the influence of nostalgia and loss on our daily lives.

As Hughes' career began in film photography, her paintings are highly influenced by the line of sight through a viewfinder where she must decide what aspects of the landscape to include within the frame.

In Conversing With Place Hughes presents a collection of visual dialogues with places that offer the freedom to be out of time, examining time as it is bound with grief to our past, present, and future. Inspired by a Wendell Berry poem Hughes states, "Disentangled from the fragility of the current moment, I can resist and rest. The simple beauty of the sky connects me to the deathless presence of love never lost. Light changing on flowers as the day progresses speaks of an eternal conversation, a brief reprieve from my limited perspective. The encaustic painting process of melting wax, struggling to shape and layer the image, is a physical dynamic of the unpredictability of wax and time. As the wax cools, the resin establishes permanence, and time is bound yet again. The final landscape is a still point that holds the history of the conversation."

Work by Amy Shekhter

"By adorning these trailblazing women in modern designer fashion and candy-inspired elements, I wanted to invite viewers to reflect on their enduring influence," says Shekhter. "It's a visual conversation between generations - where history meets today's culture wrapped in vibrant, joyful layers." Shekhter's mastery of resin and plexiglass techniques gives her pieces a glossy, candy-coated appeal while honoring the legacies of powerful women - inviting viewers young and old to engage, reflect, and delight in their stories.

Shekhter is a multi-disciplinary artist living in Florida. She spent the first 20 years of her life growing up in Alaska, which has many months of cold and darkness. This inspired her to use unconventional materials to create a space indoors filled with colorful art and interesting designs. After moving to Florida, she earned her Masters Degree in Art Education, and spent 8 years teaching public and private school students about art.

Having missed the time to create her own work, she decided to quit teaching to follow her passion and became a full-time artist. Guided by her fascination with different cultures, communities, and fashion, Shekhter merges digital design with various materials and textures. Layers of media, such as resin castings, plexiglass, beads and glass are carefully placed to give each artwork a three-dimensional appearance. Each figure is imagined from a distant memory or dream and inspired by the beauty of nature and growth, giving the viewer a sense of joy and wonder while also having them construct their
