

Robert Lange Studios in Charleston

Time and Time Again is not only a celebration of Lange's artistic journey over 20 years in Charleston but also an exploration of the passage of time and the cyclical nature of life. Through his evocative compositions, Lange encourages viewers to embrace the beauty of the present moment while reflecting on the eternal themes that unite us all. Lange is creating 24 works for the exhibit including 2 works depicting his favorite subject of all, his children.

"Looking at the magic of childhood through my children's eyes has allowed me to create the paintings I have always searched for. My paintings of Teya and Bear tend to be imagination-filled surreal expressions of youthful joy," says Lange.

Editorial Commentary

Of course others are celebrating anniversaries this year including the Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts & Culture in Charlotte, NC, it is celebrating 50 years; the North Carolina Art Society is celebrating a 100 year anniversary of the date this grassroots citizen effort initiated the call for an art collection to belong to, serve, and represent the people of NC. This eventually led to the opening of the NC Museum of Art in Raleigh, NC. But the Senior art venue of the Carolinas is the Gibbes Museum of Art which opened in 1905 - 119 years ago.

The Arts Council of Fayetteville/Cumberland County, in Fayetteville, NC, is celebrating 50 years; GreenHill in Greensboro, NC, is celebrating 50 years; Piedmont Craftsmen in Winston-Salem, NC, is celebrating 60 years; Asheville Art Museum is celebrating 75 years; and the Hickory Museum of Art in Hickory, NC, is celebrating 80 years. And I'm sure there are others. The Carolinas are part of America's original 13 states, so their institutions are fairly old. We started showing art long before the rest of the country eventually caught on to the fact that people would want to see art.

The Visual Arts Are More Than A Reception

I hate to say it, but I will, again and again - when making posts on social media about exhibits - give more than the reception date and don't forget the times, but you also should give the beginning (if different) and ending dates of the exhibit. If there is a photo of artwork in the post - say who the artist is. What's the big secret? Don't be a best kept secret, and don't make it too hard for people to find you and what you are offering.
